4 Anti-Aging Rip-Offs Every Woman Should Avoid, According To A Dermatologist

Do wrinkle creams work? It's the million dollar question. Scratch that, the billion dollar question. The beauty industry puts forth countless new anti-aging products each year, but to what end?

If you're wary of OTC creams that claim to make you look ten years younger, your instincts would be right. We've rounded up warnings from the country's leading dermatologists to determine which anti-aging rip-offs every woman should avoid:

Drugstore Retinols

Dr. Paul Jarrod Frank tells us: "I don't recommend buying retinols at the drugstore. Those sold in drug store products are very low concentrations."
